"In a world of increasingly complex tax rules, our state and local tax team always strives to provide understandable and practical guidance that our clients can put into action."

Eugene Ruvere is a partner in Citrin Cooperman's White Plains office. Eugene's central area of expertise is state and local tax. He has provided state income tax review services to both publicly and privately held companies to ascertain savings opportunities and exposures, as well as addressing client issues, from common to obscure, in regards to varied aspects of state and local tax, including income and franchise, sales and use, employment, and property taxes.

EXPERIENCE

He has previously held several important positions within the accounting industry, including serving as tax manager for both KPMG and Polo Ralph Lauren. Before joining the firm, Eugene held the role of senior controller, sales and property tax, at GE Capital.

PRESENTATIONS & PUBLICATIONS

Eugene is a regular contributor to Citrin Cooperman's LinkedIn Group, The State of Salt Forum.

OUTSIDE THE OFFICE

Eugene and his wife are parents to two energetic kids. When not trying to catch up on sleep, Eugene enjoys listening to music, hiking, and crossword puzzles.
