Sean Killgoar is the managing partner for Citrin Cooperman's Boston Metro offices. Sean has over 18 years of experience in the accounting industry. He has a specialization in the construction industry, working with contractors and suppliers. He works with a range of closely held businesses ranging from start-ups to businesses with over $1 billion dollars in annual revenues.

EXPERIENCE

Sean's technical expertise and relationships in the construction industry allow him to work as a trusted advisor for his clients on many aspects of the business beyond traditional audit and tax compliance work. He consults with clients on almost every aspect of their business strategy, including job profitability, bonding capacity, equipment and labor burden rate analyses, implementation of compensation plans, construction specific tax planning, managing working capital, and succession planning.
